Summary

I have been an audio professional for the film and television industry for 35 years, first working in audio post production since 1990 then moving full time into location sound in 2002. Since then, I have worked across all aspects of the film and television industry both here and overseas at the highest levels of production. I was the sound supervisor on the multi award winning Better Homes and Gardens for seven years, and have helmed numerous large scale reality productions such as Australian Survivor and The Renovators where I was responsible for some of the largest sound crews assembled in this country. I am a founder and moderator of the largest sound forum in Australia, have lectured on sound production at our leading universities including AFTRS, have been a keynote speaker at industry conventions and written numerous articles for international magazines. I have completed a post graduate degree in communications where my dissertation was on observational documentary. I am focussed on providing a professional, supportive and relaxing presence on set, and I believe my personal interest in fitness and nutrition is essential for the demanding rigours of a busy production set.
